and AEROSPACE WORKERS

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Your IAM Negotiating Committee continued to meet with Onex/AIT this week, and discussions regarding the sale continue to be productive and move forward in a positive direction.

The transitioning process is unique, and complex issues are being addressed. It is a pleasure to work with Advanced Fabrication, a company that values the craftsmanship and quality of work being performed by our members. They realize the value in being able to maintain continuity of skill right out of the gate.

We know that there are a lot of rumors and speculation as to the details of the negotiations, and we would remind everyone that if the information doesn't come from this team, please take it with a grain of salt. Rest assured that your IAM Negotiating Committee will continue to work through the details of the language in the new Agreement to ensure that it will protect current and future employees.

Sub-committees are in the process of being formed from the existing negotiating committee members, and will begin meeting the week after the Labor Day Holiday. Contract Language, Healthcare, and Seniority protections remain at the forefront of our negotiations.

Stay tuned for further communications over the next few weeks. We appreciate your support as we continue to bargain and fight to keep the Machinists Union at the forefront of the Aerospace Industry in Wichita, Kansas.

Enjoy your union-negotiated holiday!

In Solidarity,

Frank Molina, DBR
